WATCHFUL WAITING AT THE DOORS OF THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

"The only assistance that will be asked from republicans will be to step acros from republicans will be to step across the line and take the places of democratic insurgents. All help of that kind they get will, I fancy, depend on the legislation proposed. I would not vote for revenue legislation in which I do not believe, simply to help the democrats out of a hole into which they deliberately plunged, and from which they want to be extracted without admitting their responsibility. They should compose their differences as to facts and policies and proceed to relieve the government from the humillating position in which they have placed it, or admit their incapacity.
